PEACE OVERTURES DOMINATE OPENING OF VOTERS' LEAGUE

Three Groups Organizing to (1) Back League, (2) Join Court, (3) Outlaw War

Letter From War Department Head Atones for Slur on Women's Loyalty

By MARJORIE SHULER

BUFFALO, N. Y., April 25—Peace is running away with the convention of the National League of Women Voters. Three distinct groups are trying to capture the meeting which opened here today. One bloc is seeking to have a resolution passed indorsing the League of Nations and is planning a meeting to arouse sentiment for the resolution; another group which wants reaffirmation of the World Court has strong backing within the court has strong backing within the league committee on international cooperation to end war; the third group had its luncheon today, upon the invitation of Mrs. Ben W. Hooper of Wisconsin, to launch a war on war.

"There is a decided attempt to discredit peace workers," Mrs. Hooper said at the luncheon. "Women must stop this besmirching of the purposes and activities of peace advocates. and activities of peace advocates. Political party conventions must be kept together on the peace issue and not be permitted to make it a political football. Above all women must so-lidify their activities, and national organizations of women must work to-gether if peace is to be secured." Mrs. Hooper outlined her project to bring together a group of peace advo-cates in each of the national women's conventions including the June biennial of the General Federation of Women's Clubs and announced that she will begin a Wisconsin to California speaking tour on May 12.

Monitor Plan Favored

In all of the peace discussions the peace plan sponsored by The Christian Science Monitor has received consideration and sentiment has been ex-pressed favoring general conscription of wealth and labor in the event of war. The plan was laid before the state representatives in a closed ses-sion of the committee on international co-operation last evening, and Miss Ruth Morgan, chairman of the com-mittee, announced after the meeting that "the Monitor plan now can be considered by our state branches and expressions of opinion forwarded by them to the national committee."

Miss Mary McDowell of Chicago and Mrs. Lewis Rose of Hartford, Conn., supported the plan and there was much favorable sentiment. No action

Mrs. Henry Frankel of Des Moines, Mrs. Henry Frankel of Des Moines, Ia., recommended the Monitor plan in the open session of the committee on international co-operation late yesterday afternoon, because, she said, "It attacks the problem from a new point of view and already has the indorsement of prominent officials and legislators." Mrs. Craig Miller of Michigan recommended the plan at the luncheon today.

At the instance of the committee on international co-operation, supported by a large number of state delegations, it is understood that a committee on immigration will be formed at this convention and to it will be referred the Japanese exclusion act and the selective immigration act to find means to obviate objectionable features in

Miss Elizabeth J. Hauser of Girard, O., and Miss Katharine Ludington of New York are expected to continue as sec-retary and treasurer, respectively. Miss Marion Delaney, president of the California League of Women Voters

A movement to cut off the welfare committees of the league is sponsored by Pennsylvania and has been up for discussion in several preceding conventions. This again has come to the fore in a plan prepared by Miss Marion Reilly of Philadelphia and offered by Pennsylvania for action by individual state leagues. Miss Reilly recommends cutting the score or more league activities to five, eliminating welfare committees and combining those dealing with government under one gen-To these Miss Reilly would add an information committee to collect data on existing legislation, man out courses of study and make recom

Thus it was recently dis-covered that the whole of the new south exchange of Calcutta, which serves the residential suburb of Ballygunge as well as the suburb of Garden Reach, the docks, and the Bengal-Nagpur railway goods station, was out of communiction with the city and the main exchange. In regard to foreign affairs, he would re-establish the French moral situation in the Orient by ratifying without further delay the Lausanne Treaty and defending traditional inter-

the Ruhr operations, by the experts' reports and the preliminary decision of the Reparations Commission.

Resolved: Electrons Are 'Loafers'; Chemist Says 'Yes,' Physicist 'No'

Debate Opposing Theories Before American Chemical Society—Formerly "Irreconcilable" Views Converging

Special from Monitor Bureau WASHINGTON, April 25-Opposing theories on the functioning of the atom were presented before some 2000 members of the American Chemical Society attending their sixty-seventh annual meeting here, by two luminaries in the world of natural science. The two theories, known as the "Loafer electron" and the "Orbit," were put for-ward by an eminent chemist and a leading physicist, respectively.

Dr. Gilbert N. Lewis, dean of the college of chemistry at the University of California, who recently received the William Bibbs medal for outstanding achievement in physical chemistry, argued the case for the chemists. He is contended that each atom is a solar system within itself, made up of small magnets, and that these magnets are electrons, which do not possess activity.

The other side was taken by Dr. Robert A. Millikan, professor of physics at the California Institute of Technology, and the second American to receive the Nobel prize in natural science. His position was that electrons do possess activity.

Dr. Millikan likened the physicists and chemists to Democrats and Republicans. The physicist, he said, re-sembled the Democrats, who think for themselves and think wrongly, while the chemists resemble the Republi-cans, who hire somebody else to do their thinking for them. After citing the numerous points on which the chemists and physicists agree as to atoms, Dr. Millikan said:

The only place where we have difference of opinion, or better, in which there are uncertainties is in our carth, moving with the same speed and in the same direction. He said:

Six or eight years ago the views of physicists and chemists concerning of physicists and chemists concerning the structure of the atom seemed en-tirely irreconcilable. The chemist thought in terms of a static atom with electrons arranged in concentric cubes around the atomic center.

The physicist thought of a planetary system; electrons revolving with great speed in orbits about the center, several electrons being assigned to each similar "loafer electrons" in other atoms.

The physicist, on the other hand, has preferred to think of them as peading more active lives, playing ring-around-the-rosy, crack-the-whip and other interesting games.

In other words, he has pictured them as rotating, with enormous speed, in orbits and as occasionally flying out of the orbits for one reason or another.

Now, the arguments for the "loafer electron" theory, as I have called it, are two in number. The first is that activity, as the physicist postulates would soon wear away all the energy possessed by the electrons; that is, they would tire themselves out and quit their play.

The seed differences have largely been resolved by the chemists accepting the general orbital theory; while the physicist has changed his model to give each electron its own orbit and to ascribe to each orbit a fixity, which is required for the explanation of the facts of chemistry.

Italy today and will go to Toarina, in Sicily, where he will remain for some time. Surprise is felt here at the announcement which appeared in the French press that President Masaryk's object in coming to Italy was to conclude an alliance with Italy on the same lines as the Italo-Jugoslav pact.

In official quarters it is stated that President Masaryk is only coming for private reasons, and that his visit is not official and is devoid of political importance. It may be, however, that he will see the Italian Prime Minister, who is going to Sicily next month, but in any event, the visit will be only an act of courtesy to the head of the Italian Government.

He thought it was too easy to obtain a license. Mr. Goodwin has not enough inspectors to make the extended examination that should be made, he said. His suggestion was that instead of issuing a license at once he would issue a probationary card for a period of three months or so and at the end of that time if the driver had been in no trouble he would grant a license. Mr. Day said the summary power to revoke a license was desirable. He was opposed to the suggestion that hearings should be given first. It would take too long. The right of ap-peal to a special board he thought might meet the situation.

These songs perhaps call for more than passing comment, for they are the work of a young American composer who deserves encouragement. They show that he has not been insensible to modern harmonic tendencies, yet he has sanely assimilated this newer idiom without sacrificing a natural gift for pure melodic writing. These songs are effectively written for the voice and the accompaniments are free for the most part from those hackneyed figures which are often the bane of the young composer.

One of the arguments urged by ration bill is the probability that it will lead to reprisals by foreign nations. Canada and the British Empire generally, it is asserted, would be almost certain to impose countervailing duties on agricultural produce and perhaps even on manufactured goods. When nations begin to subsidize exports. they are unsheathing a two-edged sword. That is said particularly to apply to an international commodity like wheat. F. W. W.

Mr. Taubel added but one second, a third and a fourth to his former large winnings, and Mr. O'Boyle made even a poorer record, with only two thirds and a fourth. So with the show half through, the novices who began so well have slipped back and one ex-

Government—To Adapt Roads to Business Needs, Report

HARTFORD, Conn., April 25 (Sperail and water service transportation is a practicable possibility in New majority of industrial cities are situ-ated within a maximum distance of 40 miles from available water shipping points.

The survey was made by the United States Bureau of Public Roads in co-operation with the state highway department, the chief purpose being to obtain data concerning the character of travel over the roadways which would enable designers of the roads to suit the particular road's founda-tion to the peculiar needs of traffic over the highway.

The statistics thus obtained are expected to prove of great value in effecting the nation-wide economies in the cost of road construction. The Connecticut survey was the first of its kind ever undertaken in the United States and present plans contemplate its use as a basis for further study number of other states. Mr. Mc-

Combined truck and water transportation between Connecticut points and New York City provides an overnight movement of freight as well as a pick-up and delivery service outside of port towns. This modern correlation of highway transportation with rail and water agencies for the movement of freight is an economic function of motor transportation and function of motor transportation and offers an extensive field for development, supplementing and extending the facilities of rail and water service.

Speed Is Object

It is not competitive, provides a pick-up and delivery service, allo-cates the short haul to motor trans-portation and the long haul to rail or water, and provides rapid transporta tion of less-than-carload lots of freight tion of less-than-carload lots of freight from consignor to consignee, which is the aim of effective transportation.

The volume of products shipped by New England manufacturers and by motor truck is small when compared with their express and rail tonnage. It is largely a question of service time. Certain types of commedities are especially adapted to motor truck transportation. In the majority of cases the character of the commodity, the volume regularly available for shipment, and the service offered, determine the method of transportation.

Railroad freight congestion and rail embargoes force manufacturers to ship goods by motor truck in both the long and short haul. Rail embargoes result in an immediate in-crease in the volume of net tons of freight transported over the Connecticut highway system.

The improvement of rail service in The improvement of rail service in New England, particularly beyond the 30-mile haul, results in a decrease in the use of motor truck transportation in the long haul. Actual or potential competition of motor trucking companies with rail or water service is an incentive to both rail and water operating companies to provide effective transportation.

Warns of Overloading

The primary purpose of rail trans-portation is the line haul of freight and not the collection or distribution of freight at terminals. Carefully or-ganized and efficiently operated terminal trucking companies, assured of the co-operation of the rail and steam-ship operators, will materially "speedup" the terminal movement of freight decreasing the volume of freight warereduce the cost of moving freight through terminals, and above all, lower the rail delivery time of less-than-carload lots of freight.

The report shows that the passenger car usage of the Connecticut highway system is largely for non-business purposes. The statistics indicate that 23.5 per cent of the passenger mileisiness nurposes with 76.5 per cent for non-business usage. Sufficient information has been obtained to clearly indicate the major traffic routes which require constant super-

The report also reveals that prior to the adoption of a policy of more rigid enforcement of motor truck freight laws in this State some months ago, overloading was practiced ex-tensively. An analysis of loaded trucks over an extended period showed

McKay says:

Motor truck overloading is an uneconomical practice and forces a state to constantly police its highway system to prevent it. The influence of highway law enforcement in Connecticut is shown by the large decline in such cases during the past year. This decrease is partly due to a realization by motor truck owners of the rapid depreciation of their vehicles when constantly overloaded, but primarily the decrease is due to police enforcement of the Connecticut laws regulating loaded trucks.

The salt fish business, which has been in the doldrums, was the cause of a convention to provide ways and means to improve conditions. The Bureau of Fisheries and the United States Fisheries Association are doing some good work which must result in a benefit to the fishing industry and the stage is all set for a better performance for the year 1924.

One of the most significant develop-ments in the field of distribution in recent years is the preparation of fresh haddock and other fish in the form of fillets. The demand for these has greatly increased and promises to be a great boon to the fish business. ### COMMITTEE OF 1000 FORMED AT CAPITAL TO AID ENFORCEMENT

Special from Monitor Bureau WASHINGTON, April 25-As a resuit of the recent conference in Washington on law enforcement, a permanent committee of 1000 is to be formed in Washington. This was decided upon today at a meeting held at the head-quarters of the General Federation of Women's Clubs presided over by Miss Lida Hafford, secretary.

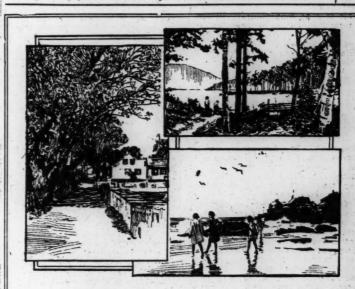

The local committee, which was largely responsible for so successfully carrying out the plans of the president and other officers of the women's national committee for law enforcement, had 788 registered members. It was voted to increase this to 1000 mem-

The Charm of a New England Vacation

Mountains, lakes, valleys, the ocean, rivers, camps, places of historic and romantic interest, old-fashioned villages-all vie with each other to make the vacationist's sojourn in New England a memorable one.

The White Mountains of New Hampshire; quaint Cape Cod, where every breeze is off the ocean and the fishing and sailing are unexcelled; Maine, with its wonderful woods, camps, magnificent scenery and well-stocked trout streams; the beautiful Berkshires, with their unforgettable charm, and the splendid lakes of Vermont -surely New England offers a richness and variety of places and experiences that will please the most exacting vacationist.

Good railroad and steamship service, excellent hotel accommodations, smooth highways for motorists, contribute to the joy of the New England vacation.

The change was effected by James A. Duncan, who came in after the first action had been taken and easily induced one of the council members to move for reconsideration. Taking the floor, Mr. Duncan then declared that universal mobilization had been severely criticized by the American Federation of Labor and that under the terms of the plan, as he understood it, wealth could evade all gov-ernmental regulation. Mr. Duncan then moved the amendment to strike out the proposed con-scription of Labor and the council acted accordingly. Until a year ago Mr. Duncan was executive secretary of the local council and was prominent in the Seattle general strike of Janu ary, 1919. # Turning from Bogus to Lively Arts With Gilbert Seldes

A GREAT many people—Laodiceans Gilbert Seldes would call them—would be honestly astonished to be told that the comic section of the newspaper is a visible expression of art. Here, however, is one of the seven lively arts about which Mr. Seldes has just written a book* upholding among other beliefs, his conviction "that the daily comic strip of George Herriman (Krazy Kat) is easily the most amusing and fantastic and satisfactory work of art produced in America today." A great many people, for that matter, are unacquainted with the adventures of Krazy and his, or her, little companion lgnatz Mouse, or Mice, for Krazy is androgynous, as Coleridge once said all great minds must be, and the fancy of Mr. Herriman jdggles amusingly with singular and plural. It is Krazy, for example, meeting a dorfancy of Mr. Herriman júggles amusingly with singular and plural. It is Krazy, for example, meeting a dormouse carrying a door, who is moved to pity, and exclaims, "Why do you a mice, so small, so dellikit, carry around a door so heavy with weight?" Less astonishment is involved in discussion of the art of Charlie Chaplin, which has already been much and almost inescapably written about; and Mr. Seldes has ground for his opinion Mr. Seldes has ground for his opinion that when Krazy was produced as a ballet Charlot was the one person who should have danced and mimed the Kat. Without taking the matter too seriously, it is rather a pity that Mr. Seldes' "The Seven Lively Arts" will not have a wider reading than will normally come to it, "a books so big, so expensif" (as Krazy might say) that our cold counselor economy may sometimes stay the glad hand of pur-chase. It belongs, from this point of view, rather to contemporary life than literature, and provides material for future students of the time we live in. One need not always agree with Mr. Seldes to find him interesting and

The lively arts, he says, "are created and admired chiefly by the class known as lowbrow, are patronized and, to an extent enjoyed, by the highbrows; and are treated as impostors and con-temptible vulgarisms by the middle class, those who invariably are ill at ease in the presence of great art until it has been approved by authority. those whom Dante rejected from heaven and hell alike, who blow neither hot nor cold, the Laodiceans."

Searching in the Comic Strips Mr. Seldes does not like the Laodiceans, but one is tempted to argue with him that their condition is not always and altogether their fault. It takes practice to be at ease all by one-self in the presence of great art, and considerable patience in the chaos of the comic page to discover Krazy and Ignatz. Mr. Seldes has waded through "a great deal of monotonous stupidity in the comic strip, a cheap jocosity, a life-of-the-party humor which is extraordinarily dreary" to find and appreciate the comics that justify his examination. And even so, there is the "successful comedy of domestic the "successf life in 'Mr. and Mrs.' No one else has come so near to the subject—the come so near to the subject—the grumbling, helpless, assertive, modest, self-satisfied, self-deprecating male, in his contacts with his sensible, occasionally irritable, wife. As often as not these episodes end in quarrels—it does not commit the vast atrocity of not these episodes end in quarrels—in utter blackness with harsh bedroom voices continuing a day's exacerbations; again the reconciliations are mushy. . . And around them plays the child whose one function is to say, 'Papa loves mamma.' It is not impossible to imagine a converted Laodicean, bravely plowing through the comics in search of pleasure, coming upon this successful comedy of domestic life, and contentedly backsliding. Tastes differ. Nothing is sliding. Tastes differ. Nothing is of criticism but a first aid to the harder to define to suit all tastes than

Beirut to Tripoli

By HAROLD SPEAKMAN AS I climb aboard the small, dingy Italian steamer in the Syrian harbor of Beirut, I note with a sense of pleasure that the tarnished gilt lettering on the bow reads Paradiso. One hardly hopes for such su-perior accommodations as the name suggests; nevertheless, after four hours' motor trip from Damascus over the Lebanons in a vehicle, consisting of a motor only, it is good to contemplate anything as restful as the Paradiso, now rolling lazily on the gentle hydraulic (dare I say springs?) of the Mediterranean.

Baggage deposited, I come on deck and look around. The steamer has ar-rived this morning from Jaffa to the south, and will shortly continue its way north up the Syrian coast. Its waist is full of native passengers, lying about in that state of torpid dérobé as before. So, with variations such as jotting down a note in a notebook, looking filled with small Syrian school at the carte de jour, looking at one's who face around and stare at us. passport, we sit in the stuffy cabin and eat our way silently down the long Italian menu.

The young lady has spoken to the waiter once or twice in French. Now, in some way or other I feel that she speaks English, and out of a really dreadful moment with a piece of let-tuce, I speak aloud. "Do you speak English?"

"Yes—a very leetle," she answers, smiling. And with that—most remarkably—the strain passes quite away. Indeed, the next morning while the boat takes on freight at the port of Tripoli, we go ashore together.
Tripoli—this is of course, the Syrian Tripoli—is not a waterside town. Its

BRITAIN TO AMEND

to Care for Them

Special from Monitor Bureau LONDON, April 8-Light upon the question of why the probation system for first offenders in Britain has not days each. been entirely successful has been afforded in the House of Lords debates on the British Criminal Justice Bill. The main object of this measure is to remove defects in the existing probationary system.

The law as it has hitherto stood in Britain, it may be recalled, enables a person found guilty, if he be very young and if it is his first offense, or if there are special extenuating circumstances, to be bound over under recognizances which compel him to come up again for trial and receive his full sentence if necessary. But in the meantime, to give him an opportunity for reform, he is put under the observation of a probation officer, and if satisfactorily reported upon is eventually discharged.

The chief difficulty hitherto found in working this system in Britain has been that a suitable authority inde pendent of the police, is not always forthcoming to look, after the probationer, and report upon his conduct. Men of the necessary character, sym pathy, and experience cannot every-where be found ready to devote the time and attention necessary to enable them to help such cases effectually. In introducing the measure in the House of Lords, Viscount Haldane pointed out how numerous are the cases where magistrates in Brit-ain are still obliged to send boys and girls to prison because no suitable person can be found to accept the responsibility of looking after them if placed upon probation. In order to effect reform the bill provides for the appointment of reg-ular probation officers in each petty sessional division, also for the com-bination of such divisions to enable services of those selected for this responsible work. It also furnishes funds to enable said officers to be employed where voluntary effort fails.

The Bishop of London, in the course of the debate in the House of Lords drow attention to the good work.

Lords, drew attention to the good work the Church of England Temperance Society is doing in this field. This society now has 155 missionaries working in 362 courts and spends on probation work £33,000 annually. The Bishop also quoted the report of a departmental committee under Sir John Baird set up by the late Govern-lest the turning of the probationary officer into a new class of civil servant should reduce his ability to appeal to the probationer as a friend rather than as an official. On this subject, however, a personal assur-ance was given by Lord Haldane that nobody in interpreting the bill shall be able to deny to voluntary societies the right either to supply agents for the right either to supply agents for missionary work in probation areas, or for engagement as probation offi-

Work That Was Formerly Drudgery Is Now Almost a Delight, and Time Is Available for Social Amenities

Correspondence)-A pretty illustration of the way in which the use of machinery lessens drudgery and gives more time for the amenities of life, is provided by the extensive use of the milking machine in New Zealand. milking machine in New Zealand Dairying is now the most valuable industry in the country after sheepraising, and bids fair to leave that behind. To make a fair income the dairy farmer must keep a considerable herd, and the milking of these cows night and morning, if it is done by hand, is a long and arduous Hired labor is a difficulty, and in too many cases the farmer has got over it by employing his children. The problem of the "child slaves" of Power for the machine remained a problem. There were obvious draw-backs to steam. The internal combus-tion engine was a boon to the farmer, but electricity will be a still greater The advocates of extension of the use of water power hope that even-tually all farmers will run their plants by the cleanest and easiest methodthe electric motor. Then the farmer will have all the more time for recreation. A curious thing about the milking machine is that it is practically unknown in the Old World. Denmark is New Zealand's greatest dairying rival, but a visiting New Zealander reported not long ago that in that country there was only one machine, and nobody knew where it was!

DEMOCRATS TO GET MADISON SQUARE

NEW YORK, April 25—The Democratic National Committee will get Madison Square Garden for their national convention free, according to a contract with Tex Rickard turned over to the committee here Wednesday. The operating and general overhead expenses of the garden, which are reported to amount to $1000 a day, will be borne by Mr. Rickard. His gift of the Garden for the convention supplements a check for $30,000 which he gave to the local Democratic committee before New York was chosen as the seat of the convention.

WOMEN'S MEETING CENSURES HOUSING

Councils Discuss Results of Ugly and Dirty Surroundings

Special from Monitor Bureau LONDON, April 10—Mrs. Pethick Lawrence, speaking at a meeting of the Women's Housing Councils, in London, recently, said: "We of the Women's Housing Councils realize that the technical difficulties surrounding the problem of housing are so baffling that nothing short of a great spiritual movement can solve them," and she went on to explain that her reason for calling the meeting was to gain the support and strengthening counsel of those women who in the past had moved mountains and, united again, could work still greater miracles. She continued: All social wrongs are doomed to a final destruction, and we want your faith, your personal service, your sacrifice, your concentration, your realization that, in point of time, bad realization that, in point of time, bad housing is the first of the social wrongs to become ripe for settlement, for in it are hidden the roots of almost every evil which lays claim to destroy our social happiness.

Mrs. Muriel Matters Porter dealt chiefly with the mental and moral in fluences of ugly and dirty surround ings. The child crying for the moon, and holding out baby hands for the brightly colored and beautiful toy was obeying the instinct of beauty, which was a law to him long before he understood the law of being good Truth telling and the quest for truth were two quite separate things—the one was a matter of training, the other an inborn desire for the beautiful things of life and of thought. The quest for truth and beauty was the children's heritage, and yet that heritage was being crushed in the child life of the slums where, in over-crowded rooms, in darkness and filth and squalor, the child forgot his long-ing for the round brightness of the moon and the toy with the fascinating color, and learned the lessons of poverty and the grayness of existence.

"Politicians," said Mrs. Porter, "talk of the problem of housing from the point of view of efficiency, independence, the capacity for production Woman talks of the problem from the point of view of humanity." Both viewpoints are necessary, and both need to be developed to the meeting of whatever may be demanded of the country in the near future.

New Law Says No Bank Director May Take Part in Management of Debtor Concern

CHRISTIANIA, April 10 (Special Correspondence) — The Norwegian Storting recently passed a bill concerning the activities of the stock banks, the most important points of which are the following: Bank activity shall be subject to Government concession, and a form of inspection is to be established, which is to act largely as a controlling body. A proposition calling for concession of banks already in existence was also passed by the Storting. Such banks are granted a respite of three years, at the expiration of which time they are obliged to have obtained a conces-sion. Concession is looked upon as a sion. Concession is looked upon as a formal provision, by means of which all banks are put on an equal footing. It seems likely that all the banks which are at present sound will be granted concession without further

The most interesting provisions contained in the law are those that aim at putting the banking business on a safe footing. Experiences from the recent bank crisis have shown that banks are easily tempted to overdo their loans, and especially to take too great risks on one single debtor. The new law provides that no single customer may be granted a loan amounting to more than one-fourth of the capital and bonds of the bank, and that the loans of a bank be restricted to 10 times the capital and bonds.

Exception, however, is made in the case of loans to the Government. The law has further provided for a repre-sentation of the depositors in the management of the bank, and onefourth of the members of the representative body of a back may consist of depositors. Another important provision reads that the general manager of the bank is not allowed to have a seat in the management of any other company or to be engaged personally in any form of business activity. Bank directors may not take part in the management of companies that are debtors of the bank. A respite of five years is granted to the banks to bring their loans and other dispositions into line with the demands of the law.

This law will be put into effect on Jan. 1, 1925. It has been under preparation since 1919. Several committee reports have been made on it and the issue has been thoroughly discussed. It cannot, therefore, be said to be a panic resolution which has now been made. Till now Norway has had no lic function. The difficulties which, owing to the economic and world crisis, have been experienced by the bank system have naturally increased the public's insistence upon regula-tion and control of bank activities.

The romance of old Quebec is the romance of America... Here France began a New World Empire, in 1608. Here struggled great Frenchmen, great Englishmen, great Americans. The forts they built, the houses they occupied, the town they coveted-all are still here ... But now has risen a crowning glory-Chateau Frontenac. A modern hotel-yet also a reliquary of history. There's a series of historic stained glass windows - a model of the ship that brought Quebec's founders. Historic figures and periods are perpetuated in its rooms. spondence) — The steadler conditions which have obtained here since the war have resulted in an enormous extension of the co-operative movement in Jugoslavia. The essentially agricultural character of the country has demanded that most of the co-operative unions be formed for the benefit of the farming or fruit cultivating classes: a conservative estimate shows that rather more than one-quarter of the population are members of this description of union. All the unions in existence before the war have been embodied in the Federation of Co-operative Unions, Belgrade. The federation now controls over 400 separate associations.

Since the war the mutual credit movement has developed enormously, the farmers and cultivators being anxious to free themselves from the tyrannical usury of which formerly they were the victims.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. April 25 (Special)—B. H. Allen, leading contender in the standing for the world's pocket-billiard title is scheduled to play the local representative. Andrew St. Jean. tonight, in the last match in this city. In the other match. E. R. Greenleaf, defending champion, of Philadelphia, second in the standing is listed to clash with Frank Taberski, Detroit player and former champion, this afternoon.

Allen appears to be the favorite to win the title because of his commanding lead in the standing. His two victories over Greenleaf are credited with placing him where he is. Only by a decided letup on Allen's part and successive wins for Greenleaf, can the champion hope to retain his title.

Both Allen and Greenleaf were the winners yesterday. The former defeated Taberski in a closely contested match. 125 to 100, while the latter easily defeated the local man. 125 to 48. Allen's victory yesterday required only 13 innings, while the Greenleaf-St. Jean match went for 21.

Allen and Taberski started off briskly in the early innings is tattenoon games yesterday, the former scoring 27 in the second inning. Taberski following in his half with 29. In the eleventh inning Allen led Taberski by a score of 96 to 49, but the Detroit player evened the score at 100. Allen returned to his earlier form and with an unfinished run of 25 won the game in the thirteenth inning. The score by innings:

Whether or not Central Massachusetts is to lose a team match this spring in the Women's Golf Association of Boston round-robin championship series appears to rest on the outcome of the next two series of matches, as they will bring to a close the first half of the competition. Central Massachusetts will be called upon to meet Brase Burn hand then will meet South Shore at Wellesley on Thursday. If Central Massachusetts wins these two matches, there is no apparent reason why it should not play the last half without a defeat.

In yesterday's matches the leaders met Brookline at Woodland and won by 5 and 4. Not only was the team competition very close; but the individual matches were, as a rule, close. Three of the matches went to the home hole for a decision. South Shore has taken undisputed possession of second place in the standing. England and Scotland Match Speed With America's Best College Runners

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., April 25—
England and Scotland matched speed today with some of America's fleetest college runners in two of the feature events on the opening day's program of the University of Pennsylvania's thirtieth annual relay carnival at Franklin Field.
Cambridge University has a combination considered faster than the Oxford quartet which captured the sprint medley relay last year. But Cambridge is expected to meet keener competition than did the Oxonians, for in Pennsylvania State College, Occidental College

Boston University last Tuesday at the Longwood Covered Courts, where the Tech men have been practicing all winter, by the score of 5 matches to 1.

Capt M. L. Tressel '24 and J. E. Russell '25 are the only two veterans and letter men who are certain of their posts, and the other two positions apparently belong to either J. J. Dunn '26, H. R. Harris '24, or Frank Broadhurst '25, all three of whom are so closely matched that Captain Tressel will not make a final selection until just before the Dartmouth match.

The Engineer leader won his way into the semifinals of the New England Intercollegiates last year, and was second throughout the season only to the 1923 captain, L. L. Tremaine. Russell has shown marked improvement during the indoor play over his previous form and is counted on by the Engineers to help them out in a heavy schedule which includes matches with Princeton, Brown and Yale.

Harris played sixth man on the Engineers to help them out in a heavy schedule which includes matches with Princeton, Brown and Yale.

This year's carnival attracted the largest number of competitors in its his-tory, the list of colleges and schools reptory, the list of colleges and schools representing every section of the country. More than 4000 athletes from 656 institutions were entered in the 93 events comprising the two-day program.

A light rain fell early in the day, but the predictions were for clearing weather and sanshine before the 400-meters hurdle race, the first event on the program, is called.

ships. One pertains to grooved and slotted clubs and the other to steel straft clubs. The notice reads:

The attention of the members of your club is respectfully called to the following rulings, made by the executive committee:

Grooved and Slotted Clubs—Club faces shall not bear any lines, dots, or other markings, made for the obvious purpose of putting a cut on the ball, nor shall they be stamped or cut with lines exceeding one-sixteenth inch in width, nor less than three-thirty-seconds inch apart, measured on their inside edges. Both line and dot markings may be used, either alone or in combination within the above limitations, provided all rough or raised edges are removed.

Steel Shaft Clubs—On and after April 12, the steel shaft club, as now manufactured, and in conformity with samples submitted to the executive committee of the U. S. G. A., may be used in all competitions held under the auspices of the United States, Golf Association, or, subject to its rules and regulations.

On either side appeared wall-pockets, painted black and bordered and decorated with flowers made according to sealing wax art. Their origin was most humble, for they were nothing more nor less than cocoa-tins, which held water and in which sprigs of ivy grew and trailed in a Japanese design up the walls.

Her few pictures beside the Cruiksbank, mostly good copies and bright color reproductions, taken from old magazines, were carefully chosen and framed with passepartout and window giass. To some people, perhaps, the walls seemed bare, but Polly believed in simplicity in background.

The HERRICK is made throughout of the finest kiln dried oak. The walls and doors are heavily packed with the best insulation obtainable—mineral wool which will not shrink, sag or decay. The doors fit tightly. The drain pipe does not permit air to enter or escape.

These features please the man of the house. He can count on efficient use of all the ice as well as preservation of food. He can depend on its long life. Whoever buys a HERRICK needs to buy but once.

Men will appreciate, too, such optional refinements as HERRICK Outside Icing and the HERRICK Water Cooler Attachment. The first saves work for the house-wife and also saves ice in cool weather. The second provides ice water—untouched by ice—from your regular water supply.

ILLINOIS PUSHES ARBITRATION FOR TRADE DISPUTES

Settlement of Business Differences Outside of Court by Arbitrator Favored

CHICAGO, April 25 (Special)-Comercial arbitration, founded upon mutual confidence and the desire of business men to do right in adjudicating business differences, is a plan that is rapidly gaining favor in Illinois, where it is being promoted by a special com-mittee of the Illinois Chamber of Com-

Of the 118 cities in Illinois having chambers of commerce that are memchambers of commerce that are members of the Illinois association, 25 have already adopted commercial arbitration policies, 25 more are now forming committees to execute this means of keeping business misunderstandings out of courte and others of the remainder are considering this highly satisfactory means of settling business difficulties. Outlining the vigorous manner in which the state chamber, one of the most active in the country, is taking up commercial arbitration, Harvey T. Hill, its general secretary, said to a reprearbitration. These meetings will be held in Cairo, Danville, Peoria, Quincy, Freeport. Aurora and Chicago.

"At these conferences will be business men from 118 cities that are now working with the Illinois Chamber of Commerce on this project. The chief object to be accomplished will be to get a strong active committee at work in a strong active committee at work in each of these local communities. At the annual meeting of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce, which will start on Oct. 3, a one-day session will be held on commercial arbitration.

In general explanation of the idea as promoted through the State, it is further said at the Illinois chamber: "In Illinois the arbitrator who is named by mutual agreement of the parties having a difference is empowered to issue subpenas and his findings, upon being filed in court, have the legal effect of a judgment of the

Growing in Favor

"The idea is one of co-operation. Commercial arbitration is perhaps the most natural way to determine who is right jn 'a business dispute, without causing ill feeling. The plan is preferable to ordinary court procedure and is growing in favor in Illinois very rapidly for several definite reasons.

"It is the quickest way to settle disputes or misunderstandings, because it is a means of disposing of cases immediately the arbitrator has been selected by both parties concerned. It is cheaper and more businesslike than court action, because the arbitrator selected to decide who is right is a man qualified by years of actual experience in the particular field under discussion. It is not necessary to take the time and effort to familiarize the 'Judge' with a host of technical details that would otherwise be necessary in a case.

Maintains Friendly Relations most natural way to determine who is Maintains Friendly Relations

"Perhans the chief value of this form of settling commercial differences is that it keeps friendly relations between both parties and that it permits business to be operated unaffected by the dispute. The plan eliminates publicity which sometimes is not only undesirable, but is very destructive. "The plan is easily operated. Parties to a controversy agree in writing to sub-mit their dispute to arbitration and the arbitration committee of the chamber of commerce then acts. An arbitrator acceptable to both parties, hears the evi

SOUTHERN PACIFIC MARCH STATEMENT HAS SILVER LINING

NEW YORK, April 25-The March eport of the Southern Pacific Company not as unfavorable as it appeared a Although net operating incom is not as unfavorable as it appeared at first. Although net operating income of $2,788,068 was the lowest for the month since 1920, gross revenues of $22,505,532, were the second highest in the company's history and only $416.556 under a year ago, and would have left the second highest net operating income for any March but for the sharp increase in both maintenance and transportation expenses.

Large expenditures were the result of the management's decision to begin preparing road and equipment for fruit movement earlier than in 1923.

This is apparent from the March report which showed an increase of $434.944 or 12 per cent in maintenance-of-way to $3,859,484, an increase of $57.652 in maintenance of cyulpment expenses to $4,297,427, and an increase of $423.209, or 5 per cent, in transportation costs to $8,315,788, when traffic was about the same as a year ago and gross revenues of $22,505,532 were $416,556 less than a year ago.

revenues of $22,505,532 were $416,556 less than a year ago.

The March reduction was not important enough to reduce the first quarter gross revenues to last year's level, although net operating income for the quarter was $6,351,42, or $1.757,591 behind the first quarter of 1923. Gross revenues of $64,558,486 for the quarter were $1.213,501 ahead of last year and represented the greatest traffic of any first quarter in the company's history.

STANDARD OIL OF CALIFORNIA STRONG IN CASH

Report Shows $10,000,000 Added to Investments, Principally Government Obligations

Net profits of the Standard Oil Company of California during 1923 showed shrinkage of less than $3,000,000 as a result of the slump in the oil industry largely occasioned by the overproduction

Its annual report, placed the profits after depreciation, depletion, interest and taxes at $24,442,439, equivalent to 10.50 per cent on the $242,926,801 capital stock outstanding, compared with $27,019,814, or 26.55 per cent on the capiof $115,000,000 in capitalization

Dividend disbursements during 4923 took $18,016,273 of the net, whereas during the preceding year only $16,285,660 was appropriated to this purpose. Expenditures on additions to plant investment were given as $21,999,240.

Gross earnings for the year amounted to $38,330,986, compared with $42,882.826 in 1922, being the smallest since 1917. The report states that in addition to the surplus arising from earnings there was added $16,724,172 as a consequence of discoveries of producing properties determined in accordance with the recure act.

The premium on the sale of the The premium on the sale of the company's capital stock was $2,916,326. The surplus account was, however, reduced by $19,331,314 depletion under government rules. As a consequence of these and other changes the surplus as of Dec. 31 stood at $63,722,990, compared with $57,363,306 at the end of the preceding year. ceding year.

Stockholders Increase

The number of stockholders in the company as of Dec. 31 was 18.025, an increase of 7121 or 65.3 per cent dur-tment securities, principally Gov-ment obligations.

"General business conditions throughout the year were good," says the report, "and the volume of business handled by the company was the largest in its history, but owing to the declines in prices of petroleum products, due to the flush production of crude oil in southern California, the value of sales did not reflect this increased volume of business. Extraordinarily keen competition was characteristic of the entire year."

In the fact of the favorable trade condition, oil securities have declined because of unsettlement in the market, and are now only slightly above the low prices of last fall, when there was a good deal of uncertainty as to the ability of many companies to some through the winter. That uncertainty is now behind them, and the industry is now at the start of its season of greatest consumption.

LIVE-STOCK PRICE TREND DOWNWARD

Marked Slump in Demand for Fresh Meat—Buyers Discriminate Against Poor Quality

CHICAGO, April 25 (Special)-The tendency of all live-stock markets has been downward so far this week, although receipts have not been excessive mand for fresh meat is given as the main reason for the break. Buyers are discriminating against poor quality beeves, and few of any of other kind

Most of the eastern demand is for better stock, and, consequently, there is a broad spread in steers prices because the top-notchers have not receded any for some time. Two weeks ago sheep rose to, an unusually high level, reachnig $17.10 for the season' Other details of the financial report set forth that the company had at the since then prices have declined $1 and end of the year $12,508,315 in cash and the since then prices have declined $1 and end of the year $12,508,315 in cash and the year $12,508,315 in cash and the year $12,508,315 in cash and end of the year $12,508,315 in cash and end year $10,433,334 to its inweight ewes getting most of the slump. Extra choice long fed steers are quotable up to $12.50 but few of the arrivals to packers. Best shipping calves are $9.50 to $10.25.

Large Tanker Cargoes

The report reviews the rise in production during the year and the efforts of the company to deal with this situation. It comments further on the situation and outlook as follows:

"One of the outstanding features of the year was the fact that large quantities of oil were moved great distances at a low cost by water. During the year an average of two cargoes a day of California oil passed through the Panama Canal. This movement was in direct competition with the midcontinent oil fields of the United States, as well as with Mexico.

Assuming sufficient tanker facilities. Well as with Mexico.

Assuming sufficient tanker facilities, it is apparent therefore that henceforth there will be a greater parity of prices between the east and west coasts of the United States.

"The abnormal conditions exising throughout 1923 are gradually correcting themselves through the rapid decline of flush production and the steady increase in consumption of petroleum and its products. In the absence of the siscocky put in storage during 1923 will be required to supply the demand during 1924."

All ISSLIES NIEAD "The abnormal conditions existing throughout 1923 are gradually correcting themselves through the rapid decline of flush production, and the steady increase in consumption of petroleum and its products. In the absence of the discovery of new and large oul fields, it is probable that at least a part of the stocks put in storage during 1923 will be required to supply the demand during 1924."

SIR ALFRED PLEADS FOR TRUTH IN NEWS

Eminent English Writer Tells Journalism Students to Uphold Ideals of Their Calling

COLUMBIA, Mo., April 25 (Special) Sir Alfred Robbins, eminent English writer and exponent of "honest journalism," made a plea for truthful news in the daily press in addressing School of Journalism students at the University of Missouri. Sir Alfred University of Missouri. Sir Alfred began his career when 12 years of age, at 18 he was an editor and at 22 was chosen one of the three chiefs of the British Press Association. Seven years ago he was made Knight

Every journalist who comes to the front must possess a keen sense of responsibility. He must not be afraid of responsibility, for if he is afraid to be "number one" he will never be "number one." In journalistic life, never write a line to which you would be ashamed to sign your name and that you do not believe to be true.

Journalistic Ideal Defined This is the aim for a journalist, as given by Sir Alfred: I claim for the journalist a distinct place in our public life, and one which will vary in height and influence, in so far as he endeavors to realize the ideal of never writing that which knows to be either degrading or false, or never sacrificing his self-respect to temporary success, and of striving his utmost and in every sense to be

"Don't Starve the Post Office"
To the Editor of The Christian Science Monitor:

I would like to express a hearty appreciation of two recent editorials in the Monitor concerning the needs of those faithful servants of the people and the American Government, the post office workers. I have talked with a hard working man who labors for the common good on an inside job, and with the letter carriers, and know how much they suffer from injustices in the matter of insufficient pay. Working for the richest people and Government in the world, they are receiving compensations quite inadequate to meet the increased demands on their pocketbooks by the up trend in rentals and other living expenses, so that many are unable even to clothe themselves in a manner that should dignify their calling and illustrate a decent appreciation from those whom they so faithfully serve. May we not hope that our representatives will awaken to their needs and do that which will give "Uncle Sam" the qualities of a more kindly "Father Sam."
"Uncle Sam" is too fine and friendly a character in legend and present-day relations to forget that he generally is indeed fatherly, and that justice to his loval self-sacrificing workers cannot implication of the exitorial. He sent for it by another postman the next morning. On receiving it he read-it, gave it to still another postman the next morning. On receiving it he read-it, gave it to still another postman, who brought the paper back to my office with these words: "I tell you, that was some ediction." It sent back word that the paper back to my office with these words: "I tell you, that was some ediction." I sent back word that the paper was given to them to keep and read; so, next day it went back to the paper was given to them to keep and read; so, next day it went back to the paper was given to them to keep and read; so, next day it went back to the paper was given to them to keep and read; so, next day it went back to the paper was given to them to keep and read; so, next day it went back to the p N. ### ICELAND GOVERNMENT ADDS ONE MINISTER

COPENHAGEN, April 12 (Special Correspondence) - The new Iceland Government consists of three members, one more than its predecessor. Ion Magnusson, the Premier, is at the same time Home Secretary and Church Min-Magnus Gudmundsson, Solicitor to the Supreme Court, is Minister for Transport and Communication, and Ion Thorlaksson is Minister of Finance.

All the members of the Ministry belong to the Conservative Party, although of the Alting, which consists of though of the Alting, which consists of 42 members, only 20 Conservatives against 15 of the Peasant Party, the old Independence Party 6, and the Social Democrats 1. Five of the Independence Party, however, including the former Premier, M. Eggers, have in the meantime promised not to oppose the Government, in any case not pending a general election, which may take place in the autumn. Should the proposal to hold a session only every other year (an outcome of the economy ax) be passed a general election will become necessary. The new Premier has been a member of several previous governments, and was Premier when the Independence Act was passed.

INDIAN WOMEN MADE JUSTICES BOMBAY, March 24 (Special Correspondence)—The recent appointment of four women in Bombay as justices of peace of the city, it is understood, paves the way to the appointment of women as honorary magistrates. In this respect Madras leads the way, as already a woman magistrate is there in the person of Mrs. S. Cousins, a talented European. The first women to he made justices of the peace are Lady Cawasji Jehangir (Parsi), Lady Jagmohandas P. Verjivanad (Hindu), Dilshad Begam (Muhummadan) and Mrs. Hodgkinson (European) representing the four principal communities of Bombay.

"Some," says he, and even with the Dolphin and "from friendship, some from interest, Anchor device, signifying swiftness and steadfastness, which is the emblem of that press, not all, perhaps, know the story of the scholar-publisher who, inspired by the idea of advancing learning and supplying the wancing learning and supplying the wancing learning and supplying the learnin vancing learning and supplying the world with beautiful books at moder-ate prices, set up his Stamperia in Venice toward the close of the fifeenth century.

Tebaldo Manucci, or Manuzio, famil-

by known after the Italian fashion by known after the Italian fashion bis day as "Messer Aldo" or "Ser the weary Atlas. Here will always lo," was born in 1450 at a little town be found in that case something for iarly known after the Italian fashion near Rome. He studied Latin at Rome and Greek at Ferrara, making friends among the scholars of the day, and in 1482 went to reside at Mirandola with his friend and fellow-student, that beautiful and gifted Count Pico. of whom both Sir Thomas More and Walter Pater give so winning a portrayal. Pico, himself a brilliant scholar, procured for Aldo two years later the post of tutor to his own nephews, Alberto and Lionello Pio of the princely femily of Carpi and it the princely family of Carpi, and it was this family which later furnished Aldo with the necessary funds for the initiation of a great enterprise. This was nothing less than the establishment of a Greek press, for the diffusion of that Greek learning which at the close of the fifteenth century was so eagerly desired; the ambition to pubclose of the inteenth century was so eagerly desired; the ambition to publish accurate and beautiful books which should diffuse the light of knowledge in the world. It seems to have been at Carpi, in 1490, that Aldo matured his plan, and Venice was selected as the best center, both pe-cause less disturbed by war than other parts of Italy and as offering greater facilities for engaging the necessary Greek scholars and workmen for the + + +

Aldo's first Greek publication appeared in 1493 or earlier, but the intervening years had been filled with work, and also with reparatory work, and also with a reading and interpreting in public for the benefit of the noble and studious youth of the city the most renowned Greek and Latin writers, collating and correcting those manuscripts which it was his intention to

Settled in a quiet house near S. Agostino, remote from the busy movement of the great Piazza and the Rialto, the scholar-printer soon be-came a center of keen interest, and attracted many visitors and correspondents: too many, indeed, to please a man whose whole desire was to do his work and do it well. This is shown by his complaint, in a dediin such profusion that, to answer them all would take him night and day. Letters, however, could, at will, be left unanswered: the problem of importunate visitors was more diffi-

you to do, however many may be." + + + In that "Beehive of Greek industry" editors, compositors, proof readers, type cutters, ink mixers, printers, binders were all needed in collating manuscripts, revising proofs, editing a pure text from various fragmentary transcripts handed down by ignorant or careless scribes, planning and activities of the book producers' work. There in his own establishment Aldo installed the necessary apparatus for producing his Greek type; there he made his ink and bound his books, the paper being supplied from the mills of Fabbriano; there, in quiet rooms apart, the celebrated scholars of the day pored over manuscripts, revising, comparing, that a perfect version might be secured.

But Aldo was not satisfied merely to publish finely revised texts of noble writings; he aimed also at the finest and format; and, not with the types at his disposal for his Latin and Italian works, himself invented a new font, the celebrated Italio type known as the "Aldine" and modeled upon the beautiful handwriting of Petrarch. This was cut by Francesco of Bologna, and Aldo him-self describes it as "of the greatest beauty, such as was never before.'

That the obstacles in his way were great and many may be learned from his own writings, in which he refers imitated his type and reprinted from his perfected versions, issuing fresh editions to supersede his own; the interruptions of war: the difficulty of securing manuscripts; but through it all his enthusiasm never flagged. "What joy," he cries, "it is to see these volumes of the ancients rescued from book-buriers and given freely to the world!" And in such achievement the world!" And in such achievement he found his reward for all that he endured. To the end he remained financially a poor man, having spent lavishly for the furtherance of his lavishly for the furtherance of his work, but by his enterprise and industry he had laid up a treasure for the

+ + + Mrs. Oliphant quotes Renouard as

"It is difficult to form an idea of the passion with which he devoted him-self to the reproduction of the great works of ancient literature. If he heard of the existence anywhere of a manuscript unpublished, or which could throw a light upon an existing text, he never rested till he had it in his possession. He did not shrink from long journeys, great expenditure, application of all kinds; and he had also the satisfaction to see that on all sides people bestirred themselves to help him, communicating, some freely, some for money, an innumerable amount of precious manuscripts for amount of precious manuscripts for the advantage of his work. Some were even sent to him from very dis-tant countries, from Poland and Hun-gary, without any solicitation on his

J. A. Symonds, in "Italian Renais-sance," gives a list with dates of the principal publications of the Aldine Press, which included the works of Aristotle, Thucydides, Sophocles, Herodotus, nine comedies of Aristoph-anes, Euripides, Demosthenes, the Greek orators, the minor works of Plato, Pindar, and many minor editions, reprints; also Latin and Italian works among which were Dante, Petrarch, Poliziano, and Bembo, -all between the years 1495 and 1514 + + +

It was natural that a man engaged in such an enterprise should become a center for the scholars of the day, most of the greatest Greek scholars in Italy, many eminent Venetians, and some, like Erasmus and Thomas Linacre, from beyond the Alps.

The Aldine Press survived for two generations, but, under his sons, and his grandson, Aldo il Giovane (the nger), the publications gradually declined in beauty and importance, and Aldo himself remains the most labors he had, as J. A. Symonds writes, "secured the literature of ancient Greece against the possibility of destruction."

Chaparral

In the spring of the year this chap-arral is often very beautiful with blossoms of buckthorn, wild cherry, white lilac, manzanita, and wild mahogany, while the valleys below are blue and pink with alfilaria or bright with violets that are not violet-hued but golden. The endless variety of flowers on the desert after the winter rains has exhausted the adjectives of many a writer. I never thought to describe the red and blue and gold and white of them. It was sufficient for me to see them, to stop and linger over them, and to love their beauty. It was not the rambling strontium, or the brilliant flowers of the various cacti, or the great cream-colored bells of the yucca that made the strongest appeal, but the small baby blue-eye the yellow mimulus, or high up or face-wall of a mountain, rooted beauties that blush unseen . . . unknown and unnoticed that the species may not perish from the face of the earth! They waste little sweetness on the desert air, for wild flowers are generally scentless, nor do they waste any beauty, for beauty is its own excuse for being; but they are so isolated, so lonely, so forsaken of their kind that one sighs over them and, perhaps, indulges in pathetic fallacies regarding them. Fidwers on the desert! They are more splendid than shining gold or glittering diamonds.—John C. Van Dyke, in "The Open Spaces."

Read Read We are the roadside flowers, Straying from garden grounds,—It overs of idle hours.

Breakers of ordered bounds.

If only the earth will feed us, if only the wind be kind, we blossom for those who need the stragglers left behind.

And lo, the Lord of the Garden, He makes his sun to rise,

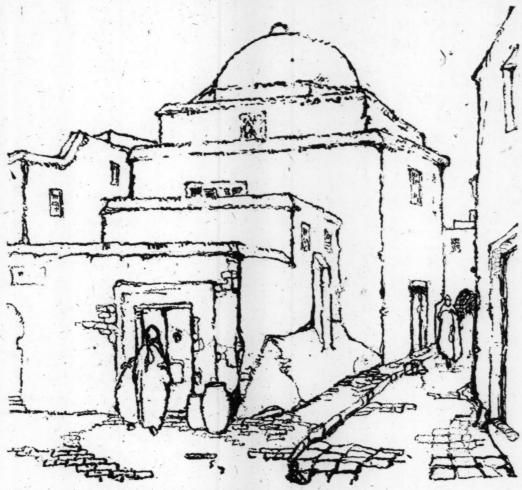

We blossom for those who need us.

And his rain to fall with pardon On our dusty paradise.

Roadside Flowers

On us He has laid the duty,— The task of the wandering breed, To better the world with beauty, Wherever the way may lead.

Who shall inquire of the season. Or question the wind where it blows We blossom and ask no reason. The Lord of the Garden knows.

The Sacred Well at Kairouan. From a Pencil Sketch by Irma Kohn

WHEN Muhammad came to the Tunis, he found an active spring whose water resembled in taste that of Mecca. He at once decreed the well sacred, and around it an Arabian city sprang up, which today is one of the oldest, the most picturesque and most primitive in Tunis.

In the heart of Kairouan, in one of its oldest buildings, the well exists today. Under its dome, hour after hour and day after day, a camel pumps the water, which is carried up from the well in crude earthenware bottles, strapped to a water wheel, and is emptied into a trough on the street for the consumption of the donkers and camels, and for those people who wish to drink it. Its taste is not pleasant.

The camel which at present pumps the water, is a huge old beast, splen-didly groomed. In the slow, monot-onous pacing of his circle, he presents a rather pathetic picture of patience.

A Nikko Artist at His Work

(Sixth' Century)

Written for The Christian Science Monito Across the chasm of the years This a bridge shall be.
Across—my soul shall flow
In beauty unto thee.

In warming fertile sunlight, In soothing mellow moonlight, Through the grayness of the falling The message is for thee.

Child of promise ages hence, Let the vision come to thee
And bridge the seeming chasm Between thy kind and thee.

A. Anderson.

Sunset on the Bahr Moas, Egypt

The sunset sky is glowing with pink and gold as the sun, like a ball of molten fire, hangs over the western horizon. The calm Bahr Moss, wind-ing through fertile fields of cotton and clover, shines with a delicate reflection of the sky above, and mirrors on it surface groups of graceful date palms standing on its banks. A misty golden haze hangs over the distant fields—where the soft, rich tints of clover and the brown earth clods with brilliant patches of vellow mustard, mingle. The fellahin, after a long day of reaping and irrigating their crops, lead home their cattle along the dusty highroad. The hoofs of the cattle kick up little clouds of white dust; but it is mellowed in the sunset, and all takes on a soft, glowing tint.

From the town across the water there steals a hushed confusion of typical Oriental sounds—on the bal-cony of a minaret the high-pitched drone of a silken-robed muezzin calls the natives to prayer. The pine and eucalyptus trees, bordering the read by the river side, begin to throw long, latticed shadows on the carpet of fragrant bluebells, shaken from the acqueranda trees by the cool, evening breeze. A picturesque felucça skims along the water with full white sails billowing in the wind,—the water ripples into the stern and breaks into

The Sea to Winslow Homer

Mr. Masefield in one of his most glorious sea poems, "The Dauber," has das kleine Mädchen aus: "Ach, dass Prinzips aus, und wir können es im expressed his faith that no true paintich doch auch so etwas Grosses und täglichen Leben demonstrieren. "First the blade, then the ear, then the full grain in the ear"

BOSTON, FRIDAY, APRIL 25, 1924

EDITORIALS,

In the continuing discussion of the action of the American Congress, excluding Japanese immigrants from the States, four matters are to be

It's Never Too Late to Mend the States, four matters are to be kept clearly distinct in the thought of those who would either see the happening with intelligent accuracy or debate it with justness. First comes, of course, the fact. Both chambers at Washington have carried by overwhelming majorities amendments to the pending immigration bill barring from entry "aliens ineligible to citizenship," save in the usually excepted classes of "non-immigrants," "ministers of any religious denomination," "bona fide students" and certain specified relatives of these. No hint has come from the White House as to how the President views the measure or may act on it, but it appears certain that the Senate as well as the House can muster readily more than the two-thirds vote necessary to override a possible veto—unless some wholly new (that is, hitherto unconsidered) factor should be set in the troubled equation.

Next comes the immediate cause of the decision. Ambassador Hanihara, in a formal communication to Secretary Hughes, protesting against what he saw as a possible discrimination against his people, used, in reference to what might follow thereon, the words "grave consequences." That is to say, the translation of his letter sent the Senate from the State Department contained the phrase, though it has been affirmed to be a faulty rendering of the original. The upper chamber took the words to contain a "veiled threat," and acted instantly so as to place the greatest (and gravest) emphasis on their disapproval. It is understandable how a belief that the Nation's undoubted right wholly to determine its immigration policy had been challenged, and challenged, too, in a way intended to influence free action, should have led to answering action of extreme sort, but this is not to deny that such reply might be regrettable. In fact, it is extremely regrettable, as it grows increasingly evident that so open a wounding of the natural pride of a friendly neighbor really was not

Thirdly is the ulterior reason, going back the better part of a generation. It is the conviction cherished by certain Americans, and more and more urged by them, that immigrants from the Orient in general and from Japan in particular are not of a sort desirable to the complex of tomorrow's population. It is generally known that this opinion, while held by a majority of the white residents of the Pacific coast commonwealths, is found to decrease as a traveler journeys eastward, and amounts to little before the Mississippi is reached. Along the Atlantic seaboard it is doubtful if one citizen in fifty

The fourth phase of the whole question is the attitude of Japan herself, an attitude woven of the two threads of official and popular opinion. The instant reaction in the archipelago to the news of the decision reached at Washington was shocked surprise. The jingo press, in all things hostile to the United States, was quick to break out into characteristically "yellow" talk of retaliatory measures which might go as far as war itself, but so exaggerated a pose was repudiated at once not only in the formal comments of the authorities but also by the saner journals and the more experienced men and women now prominent in Japanese life. A deal of resentment continues, and even more of amazement. Nippon, whether official or popular, would raise no objection to any ruling against her nationals which set them on a par with other peoples seeking entry into the States, but feels outraged by a law discriminating against them on the ground of racial inferiority. Such a law almost inevitably will be attended by a most unsatisfactory drift in the relationship existing between the two lands.

From the opening of this debate The Christian Science Monitor has believed that the national Legislature could control adequately the number of Orientals desiring to enter the country by imposing in their regard, as in regard to Europeans, whatever quota limitation might seem needed and best. It still so believes, and hopes that some way soon may be found to permit a reconsideration of the exclusion plan. All history shows that only by rarest exception is a vitally important decision reached wisely when it is arrived at hastily and in the heat of feeling. Roland Morris of Philadelphia. former American Ambassador at Tokyo, struck the nail of fact squarely on the head when he said the problem could have been solved to mutual satisfaction had the Senate acted less hurriedly: "had there been a decent opportunity for a fuller discussion." But it is never too late to mend. A veto, even though it failed of support in Congress, would at least align the Administration on the side of international courtesy.

THE many deliberate robberies which have been perpetrated on countless Americans during the last few years

Protecting the People's Investments

by unscrupulous and careless bankers and brokers merit far more attention than has been generally accorded to them. Indeed, the problem of fraudulent investment deals has become a menace almost impossible to exaggerate, because the constantly recurring instances of the deliberate deception of innocent people through dishonest misrepresentations have jeopardized the life savings of thousands of investors.

And yet relatively little attention is paid in the newspapers to such occurrences, no matter how often they take place. The fact remains, however, that thousands of honest American citizens are today mourning the loss of their savings, which they invested to the best of their understanding and in accordance with recognized ideas of thrift and economy. The result is doubly deplorable, because it not only robs them of the fruits of their labors, but demoralizes their faith and courage. It tends to make them believe that no man's word is worth accepting, and that they may as well have a good time today in spending their all, rather than have nothing tomorrow as a result of someone else's dishonesty.

So prevalent have these methods of fleecing the public become that it would seem inevitable that the Government should take vigorous steps in the near future to protect the people from them. Primarily, of course, some means of preventing the launching of these questionable schemes is desirable. The people have a right to expect that, when a project is presented to them for investment, there is at least a reasonable chance that it is a genuine enterprise and that they can believe the substance of what is told them by the agent or broker. There should also be laws insuring as far as possible the restitution of moneys paid out in good faith, the proviso being accepted that any project advanced must be backed by tangible assets. Moreover, the governmental machinery, instead of being limited to bankruptcy courts and laws which may be used by unscrupulous individuals as a means of escaping responsibility, should be employed to safeguard the interests of the saying investors. Finally, adequate penalties should be provided in the event that definite guilt is established, to be applied in the case of all responsible, even though previous use may have been made of the bankruptcy courts.

THE tragic Franco-German tension is reflected in the pre-election campaigns now going on in the two countries.

The Jingo Reaction in Germany "Every speech made by M. Poincaré," said Gustav Stresemann, the German Minister of Foreign Affairs, in a special interview with The Christian Science Monitor's Berlin correspondent last week, "furnishes the extreme (German) Nationalists with another 100,000 votes." A recent cartoon in the Humanité, the Communist daily of Paris, showed on a campaign poster an ugly face with a knife between the teeth, to which M. Poincaré was calling the attention of the French electorate. It was labeled, "Ludendorff," while the very same face on a German campaign poster was stamped "Poincaré." Will Europe ever be pacified until all the inhabitants have access to the same sources of information? "To make men fight," wrote General Hamilton in his recent book, "The Friends of England," "it is even more necessary to invent lies than to make poison gas."

Whatever the cause, there is in Germany an unmistakable current to the Nationalist Right. After the military defeat the Social-Democrats won so many adherents that they became the strongest group in Parliament, numerically speaking. They are still the mainstay of the Republic, but in the coming election their position is seriously. threatened. Their chief support comes from the tradesunion members and these have either been attracted further to the Left, to the Communist Party, or are too oppressed by economic difficulties to make a fight. The fall of the mark has drained their money reserves. Often they are unable to aid their own unemployed members, to say nothing of financing an electoral campaign. The Communists, on the other hand, enjoy the backing of their friends in Russia. Their extreme demands also naturally appeal more strongly to the distressed working classes than the relatively moderate program of the Social-Democrats. Within the Socialist Party itself, the more radical section, composed of the former "Independent Socialists," who opposed the war, is gaining the Next to the Socialists, the relatively small Democratic Party is threatened with heavy losses, if not total extinction. In the various governments, formed under the Weimar Constitution, it has always been a part, being needed for the creation of a majority, but its former leader, Herr Petersen, is devoting himself to municipal administration in Hamburg. The liberal, middle-class friends of the Republic may rally under a new leadership, but the prospects are not favorable. This is no time for moderation. It is the extremists at either end who have wind in their sails.

The other middle-class party which has supported the Republic, the Roman Catholic Center, is less in danger on account of its backing by the Church of Rome, but whether in the future it will continue to support the Republic is not so certain. For personal reasons, ex-Premier Joseph Wirth is forced to take a passive attitude, and the more conservative wing, led by Herr Stegerwald, is gaining in preponderance. The Chancellor, Wilhelm Marx, is not an aggressive leader. The party may in the future give its support to a monarchist majority led by the Nationalists. Like its parent organization, it is an adept at adaptation.

The German Peoples' Party is also shifting toward the Right. In his campaign addresses, Dr. Stresemann has not hidden his monarchistic preferences. Threatened by the Stinnes industrialist faction, with a split within his own party, he has been forced to take a more nationalistic attitude and to minimize his co-operation with the Republicans to the Left. The Social-Democrats have denounced him as an opportunist, pure and simple. Being the party of big industry and big business, the Peoples' Party does not lack financial backing, but its representation in the Cabinet hinders its electioneering.

The extreme Nationalists are not so handicapped. Financed by the land-owning junkers of the north, in Pomerania, East Prussia, and Mecklenburg, they are waging a vigorous campaign. The circumstances favor them. By defying France, they are able to arouse the German military sense, and by denouncing the Jews as profiteers, they give expression to the general discontent over the new distribution of wealth. In the next Reichstag one of the best known Nationalist leaders, Hergt, is almost certain to be placed on the ministerial bench, and perhaps men even more extreme. General Ludendorff himself, lately acquitted of high treason at Munich, on grounds that convinced nobody, is a candidate for the Reichstag, while Admiral Tirpitz, another sinister figure, is believed to be a candidate for the Presidency of Germany next year. In such hands the Republic and popular government are not safe. A triumph for them in Germany on May 4 is likely to aid M. Poincaré in France on May 11.

AN IMPOSING array of witnesses called to support the contention of the Association Against the Prohibition

Are These Expert Witnesses?

Amendment has appeared recently before the House Judiciary Committee in Washington. These witnesses, perhaps seeking to qualify as experts, have described themselves as clergymen, lawyers, doctors, labor leaders, and the like. They have added many pages to the record, but it does not appear that by the process they have increased the sum of human knowledge in respect to the matter which they have attempted to discuss with assumed finality. One of the witnesses who gave voluntary testimony in support of the plan to modify the enforcement law so as to permit the sale of beer is a Massachusetts minister and member of the State Legislature from Ware. He is the Rev, Roland D. Sawyer, who made the somewhat startling statement that conditions in some of the industrial cities of New England are worse under prohibition than they were before the law was enacted. He said that while the people have "accepted the rigidity of the Eighteenth Amendment, they would never accept the Volstead enforcement code." He declared this code to be "a legislative lie."

This witness rehearsed before the committee many of the statements which have comprised the stock in trade of the nullificationists since the enactment of the law. If what he asserted is a fact, the wonder is that there are not thousands or indeed millions of witnesses to offer verification thereof. But it is not a fact. The convincing proof of this is everywhere present. No one who observes is ignorant of the conditions that exist in every city and village in the United States. Drunkenness and poverty have diminished to what, ten years ago, would have been regarded as almost the vanishing point. There are violations of the law. Liquors are obtainable by those who insist upon buying them, but the degrading and demoralizing conditions which Mr. Sawyer complains of are not chargeable to prohibition. They exist because of the indulgence in intoxicating liquors contrary to the plain terms of a law which has the moral support of perhaps 99 per cent of the members of the profession which the gentleman proudly claims as his own.

The fallacy of the line of argument pursued by these witnesses, including besides the Massachusetts clergyman such representative advocates of nullification as Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor; Matthew Woll, a vice-president of that organization; Henry S. Priest, a St. Louis lawyer in the pay of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment; Dr. J. C. Vorbeck, a St. Louis physician, and Dr. James Whitney Hall, director of the Psychopathic Hospital of Cook County, Ill., is that they begin with the assumption that beer is not intoxicating. The alcoholic ingredient is what the advocates of modification are pleading for. Dr. Vorbeck, contrary to studied opinions offered by many members of his profession, declared that "the human body cannot live in health without alcohol." He expects the "innocuous" beer for which he and his fellow witnesses plead to supply this indispensable ingredient and thus save humanity from sudden annihilation.

The Massachusetts clergyman is reported to have offered the observation that the friends of temperance have been led astray. There is no evidence of this unless it is true that some of those who, by their professions and their previous protestations have been counted as champions of decency and order, have yielded to strange influences. The social unrest which is apparent in the United States is being fomented, not by the popular demand that observance of the law be compelled, but by those very agencies which, since the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment, have been enlisted in a ruthless campaign of nullification.

Editorial Notes

'ONE of the most remarkable series of experiments in natural science conducted in late years has been in connection with the effort to convert light into sound. As a result the workers in the laboratories of the French military wireless center at Les Invalides have produced an instrument which is proving that the "chant des étoiles" is not merely a pleasing fancy. Without going into details, it may be explained that the inventors of the instrument have obtained from the rays of the star Capella, billions of miles from the earth, certain variations of electrical current which have been amplified and otherwise "treated" until they can be conveyed by telephone and, as one writer puts it, "the stars can be heard to sing." The writer of the book of Job wrote wiser than many readers have believed when he spoke of the morning stars singing together.

There is always a certain fascination about the subject of commuting. Hence the competition which was recently announced by the Erie Railroad to find the commuter who has ridden longest over its tracks is arousing widespread interest. Information is at hand concerning one who traveled thus for fifty-five years, while several have round about a half a century to their credit Almost 1,000,000 miles is the distance covered already by one traveler who for more than twenty-five years has commuted fifty-nine miles each way every working day. While fully granting the delights of a country home, it is still a moot question with many whether submitting to the discomforts of more than 100 miles a day on the train for its attainment is not paying rather too high a price.

The Turks and Their Neighbors

THERE is not a little interest among those who are watching the progress of world affairs in the effect the success of the Turkish Republic might have on such neighboring countries as Syria and Mesopotamia, and, ultimately, the other Moslem countries of Arabia and even North Africa. Would the Turks be likely to seek by conquest or otherwise to repossess those provinces which formerly belonged to Turkey? Would the success of the Kemalists in establishing a free native government arouse those states to attempt a similar achievement?

The present avowal of the Turks seems to involve no more than the desire to secure their own absolute freedom to manage their national affairs as an ethnic group. They are stressing, perhaps overstressing, this intention by expelling from their midst members of other races. The inference is that if other peoples will leave them alone, they will practice the same virtue toward other peoples. On the eve of the Lausanne Peace Conference the Angora National Assembly offered as a basis for negotiations concerning the Arab provinces, the following: "Those territories of the Ottoman Empire populated by an Arab majority and being, at the time of the armistice (Oct. 31, 1918) occupied by the enemy armies, shall be ruled according to the will of the local populations."

This proposition was made by the Turks in the hope that if those populations were allowed freely to decide the matter of their future government, they would choose to be reunited with Turkey. As is well known, this demand was not granted by the other nations at the Lausanne Conference. They did not think that the Turks had the right to say how those territories should be ruled. In the flush of victory over the Greeks, the Kemalists seemed to overreach themselves in such demands. But there was method in their madness.

Perhaps no other event in recent history so profoundly thrilled the Eastern peoples as did Mustapha Kemal's brilliant victory over the Greek invaders. It was considered not only a Turkish, but an Asiatic victory. Congratulations and gifts of money poured upon the "conqueror" from various parts of the East, regardless of race or language. "Free Turkey" assumed no less significance in the minds of those peoples than free Japan. It seemed to presage the liberation of that ancient continent from all foreign rule. It was this apparently which the Turks had in mind when they made their demand upon the Lausanne Conference.

Recent events have somewhat weakened those sympathies toward the Turks. Millions of Moslems are in a state of resentful amazement at the conduct of the "insolent Kemalists" toward the former Caliph. The Kings of Hejaz and Irak cannot look with real satisfaction upon the progress of republicanism in Turkey. The Syrians regard with apprehension the expulsion of the Armenians from the Turkish Republic, not only from a sense of pity for the Armenians, but because those unfortunate fugitives are pouring into Syria, and there creating serious racial and social problems. Nevertheless I feel warranted in saying that the majority of the intelligent classes in the East are still in sympathy with the Turks, not as Turks or Moslems, but as Orientals. They are fighting for freedom, and, whether fully understood or not, this word has magical charms for those peoples under alien rule.

charms for those peoples under alien rule.

The majority of the Syrians are hostile toward their French rulers. "Freedom" has not come to them with the French. French rule has been forced upon them and is maintained over them by the bayonet. A Turkish republic next to them is a constant reminder to the Syrians that freedom is ever within the reach of these who are willing to next its cert.

At the north of Syria the close contact of the Turks with certain Moslem leaders is not altogether agreeable to the French. They are maintaining at that point a strong military force for the purpose of "protecting" Syria against the incursions of the Turks. I imagine that France would be reluctant to go to war with the Turkish Republic on account of the closing of the French schools in that country, with a restless Syria behind her, and a revengeful Feisal farther behind in Irak. French rule in Syria has not been such as to wean the people from sympathy with the Turks.

At least so far as can be seen, the Turks have nothing to fear from their Eastern neighbors. On the contrary they must consider Syrian discontent with the French as a Turkish asset. And it would seem certain that the Angora Government, realizing all this, is now driving out the alien races from eastern Asia Minor in order to leave no seditious elements in its rear, in case a European power attacked the young Republic at some point along the coast. The Turks have many friends in Syria and Mesopotamia, and a successful Turkish republic could not fail to exert a strong influence upon those countries as well as other Near East provinces. Bewildered Asia is in a state of revolt against autocracy and Western domination. Up to the present its source of encouragement has been free and powerful Japan. Turkey, it is said, may be another inspirer.

But Turkey is still uncertain of her future. Her geographical position is beset with many dangers. In case of a serious disturbance in the Balkans it is impossible to see how Eastern Thrace, and Constantinople—Turkey's liability—can escape being involved. Nor is there a clear evidence that Soviet Russia would not be as eager to seize the great city on the Bosporus as Tsarist Russia was. The Kemalists' drastic measures in dealing with their problems—measures which are essentially military in their tone, rather than diplomatic—will, if continued, be likely to involve them in a conflict with Europe, whose conclusions may not contribute to the furtherance of Turkish aims. Such possibilities cannot very well be ignored. Yet, let us hope that both the Turks and those involved with them in the effecting of political readjustments may prefer the power of good will to that of the sword.

Women and a New World

CLEMENCE DANE, an Englishwoman of literary distinction. questions in the World's Work whether women have got what they want. The present civilization, she contends, is poorly adapted to women's wishes and, she writes, "I cannot help believing, speculation apart, that woman might do much more with her freedom than use it merely to help in elaborating a civilization which falls foul of her profoundest instincts. Man has dreamed his dreams, and where have they led him? To the watch on the Ruhr; to the 'tin-can' speeches of the election campaign! But has woman no dreams? Are her ideals always to be imitation ones? The right to earn her bread and toil in the cities as the men toil, bearing children in her spare time, is that to be the end of all things? Who knows? But one thing I know: that if we are to continue halving life with our fellow man without regard to the difference in sex, we shall have to alter fundamentally our conceptions of what that life should be. The life of the cities today is no life for a woman. She is too good for it. It's waste. Simplification or Victorianism-one or other remedy we must resort to; or we shall have given more to secure our game than the game is worth,"
